

Classical Indian Temple Dance

By Indira-devi dasi

yatho hastha sthatho drñiyatho drñi sthatho manä

yatho manä sthatho bhävayatho bhäva sthatho räsa

Where the hands are go the eyes, where the eyes are goes the mind,

Where the mind goes is bhava (mood) where bhava is manifests rasa (aesthetic taste).

Contents

Introduction	2
The Origin of Drama.....	2
The plea of the Sages	2
Three styles at the outset	4
Svati and Narada to assist Bharata	4
Characteristic features of the dramatic art	5
Adoration and floral offerings	6
The gist of the topics dealt with in the First Chapter.....	7
Natya-vatara.....	7
Incarnation of the Science of dramatic performance.....	7
The sages curse the sons of Bharata	8
Gods plead on behalf of the sons of Bharata	9
Bharata's sons approach the father	9
Bharata consoles his sons	9
Nahusa invites divine Artists to the earth	9
Gods reject.....	10
Nahusa pleads to Bharata	10
Urvasi and the dramatic performance.....	10
Bharata concedes	10
Demonstration of the dramatic art on the Earth	10
The greatness of Natya Sastra	11
Historical Background of Vedic Temple Dance.....	11
Bharata Natyam	13
Alarippu	14
Jatisvaram.....	14
Sabdam	14
Varnam	15
Padam	15
Thillana.....	15
Mangalam	15
Singing	16
Abhinaya.....	17
Gestures	17

Introduction

“The hastas or hand gestures may be said to be the alphabet of the suggestive language of Bharata natya. Many of these mudras are common to both the Tantra Shastra and Bharata natya. Tantra Shastra is an arduous ordeal of religious disciplines meant to spiritualize the physical body in various ways, and here the mudras play an important part. The very fact that these same mudras also occur in dancing bears testimony to the religious character of Bharata natya. How these mudras acquire new meanings artistically in Bharata natya is a subject that deserves study. Suffice it, if I point out a single example. The mudra of joining the tips of the thumb and the forefinger is called chin-mudra in the religious scriptures, meaning the ‘Sign of Wisdom.’ It is the Wisdom of realizing the oneness of the individual soul (signified by the forefinger) with the Supersoul (signified by the thumb). Now, the chin-mudra is accepted in this scriptural sense in dancing also. But see what new meaning it acquires in addition. It is the Sign of Wisdom only when the palm is held in a graceful slant. The same mudra when the palm is held stiffly upright depicts the valor of the bowman who holds the arrow between the two fingertips. When, with the palm's back to the audience's view, the danseuse touches the mid-point of her eye-brows with this mudra, it conveys her putting of the mark of beauty, the tilaka. So the same mudra stands for three such entirely different concepts as spiritual wisdom, valour, and preparation for meeting her lover.”

(Quoted from an article by Srimati Balasarasvati devi-dasi in the Quarterly Journal of the National Centre for the Performing Arts)

The Origin of Drama

Natya Shastra, Chapter One

(1) I bow to the grandfather of the world (Brahma) and the great lord Shiva and proceed to propound the Natya Shastra (the science of gesticulation and dance originally imparted by Brahma).

The plea of the Sages

(2-5) Formerly Atreya and other noble-souled sages with great control over their sense organs approached the righteous Bharata, the master of the science of drama and dance, at the time when they had a short respite from studies. The sage had just concluded his Japa (repetition of holy names and utterance of prayers) and his sons, too, were with him. They asked him with great respect, “How did Natya Veda on a par with the Srutis originate? O Brahman, verily you had propounded it. For whom is that Science intended? How many parts does it have? What is its magnitude and how are we to apply the same? Kindly bless us with the full details.”

(6) On hearing the request of the sages Bharata began to explain the Natya Veda thus.

(7) – "Let the origin of the Natya Veda evolved by Brahma be heard by you all after being pure and attentive."

(8) – "O Brahmins, the Manvantara [time of reign] of Svayambhuva [Manu] passed by and later on the Krita-yuga [Satya-yuga) of Vaisvasvata Manu, too, passed. Thereafter, when the Treta-yuga arrived people became victims of lust and covetousness, and were engaged in rustic rites and activities, overwhelmed by jealousy and deluded by wrath, experiencing happiness and misery. When the Jambudvipa was overrun by the Devas, Dinavas, Gandharvas, Yaksas, Raksasas and great serpents it became well established by the guardians of the worlds (i.e. Indra and others) when Mahendra and other leading Devas submitted Pitamaha [Brahma], - 'We wish to have a pastime that shall be simultaneously be visual as well as auditory'.

(12) 'The Vedic discussion and practice cannot be proclaimed among those born of the Sudra caste [laborer class]. Hence evolve another Veda common to all the Varnas (castes).'

(13) After saying to them "Let it be so" he dismissed the king of the Devas. Conversant with all principles he made use of the yogic power and recollected the four Vedas.

(14-16) The divine being resolved thus, - "I shall evolve this Veda entitled Natya Veda along with its historical basis. It shall be conducive to righteousness, production of wealth and diffusion of fame; it will be richly endowed with the topics dealt with in all the scriptural texts and it will demonstrate all types of arts and crafts." Fully recalling to his mind all the Vedas after this resolution the holy lord created Natya Veda born out of the four Vedas and their ancillaries.

(17) He took the Pathyam (recitals) from the Rg-Veda, Gitam (music) from the Sama-Veda, Abhinayas (histrionic and gestural representation) from the Yajur-veda and the Rasas (sentiments) from the Atharva-Veda.

(18) In this manner the charmingly graceful Natya Veda having its origin and connection with the Vedas and Upavedas was evolved by the noble-souled holy being Brahma.

(19-20) After evolving the Natya Veda, the Creator instructed Indra as follows, - "Historical legend has been got ready by me. Put it to practical use among the Suras [godlike people]. May this Natya Veda be passed on to those among them who are proficient, shrewd, mature and indefatigable".

(21) On hearing what has been mentioned by Brahma, lord Sakra joined his palms in reverence, bowed down to Brahma and replied thus.

(22) - "O divine Sir, the Devas [demigods] are unworthy of the theoretical art because they are incapable of receiving, retaining, comprehending and putting it into practice."

(23) These [Devas] are the sages conversant with the esoteric mystery of the Vedas and perfect in the observance of holy vows. They alone are capable of receiving, retaining and putting it into practical use.

(24) On hearing the words of Sakra the lotus-born lord said to me [Bharata], - "O sinless one, accompanied by your hundred sons you shall be the one putting this art to practical purpose".

(25) Thus commanded I studied Natya Veda from Pitamaha [Brahma] and taught it to my worthy sons along with its proper practical application.

(26-39) [Names of the hundred Sons of Bharata]

(40) At the bidding of Brahma the hundred sons were engaged by me in such of the roles as suited them. My idea was to see that the people are benefited by it.

Three styles at the outset

(41-42) Everyone was engaged in that activity where he was found most suitable. O Brahmins, theatrical performance based on the three Vrttis (dramatic style), viz. Bharati (verbal utterance), Sattvati (grand conception of the mind) and Arabhati (vigorous physical activity). Approaching and bowing down to him I submitted to Brahma about my activity.

(43) Then the leader of the Sikas said to me, - "Add Kaisiki (the charmingly graceful), too. O excellent Brahmin, tell me the material befitting it".

(44) I had been asked thus. The lord then was replied to by me, - "O holy sir, may the material contributory to the performance of Kaisiki be given to me".

(45-46) "I have witnessed the Kaisiki style during the dance of the blue-throated lord (Siva). It consists of Mrdu-angaharas (gentle gesticulation and movements of the limbs). Rasa (sentiment), Bhava (states) and Kriya (activity) constitute its soul. The dress should be charmingly beautiful and the erotic sentiment is its basis. It cannot be adequately portrayed by men. Except women, none can practise it properly."

(47) Then the highly resplendent lord mentally created the celestial damsels who were extremely proficient in heightening the beauty and charm of the dramatic art and dance performance. He then gave them to me for the purpose of performance.

(48-50) [The names of the celestial damsels, Apsaras]

Svati and Narada to assist Bharata

(51) Along with his disciples Svati was engaged by the self-born lord on the musical instruments, Narada and other Gandharvas were engaged in the Natya-yoga (activity of dance) and Gana-yoga (in singing songs).

(52-53) After being convinced that this Bhava Natya (dramatic art and gesticulation of emotions) had been perfected because it is based on the Vedas and Vedangas, I approached the lord of the worlds (Brahma) accompanied by all my sons as well as Svati and Narada with joined palms for the purpose of demonstrating it. "The dramatic art has been acquired. Tell me, what shall I do?"

(54-55) On hearing these words, Ptamaha [Brahma] said, - "A grand occasion for the production of the play has arrived. Here the festival of the flag of Mahendra [Siva] is going on. May this Natya Veda be produced here now".

After the first performance the Devas were delighted and gave the actors all sorts of requisite articles by way of gift. Brahma gave the Kamandalu (water pot), Varuna gave a gold pot. Surya gave the umbrella; Siva fulfill of desires; Vahyu, the god of wind, gave a fan; Lord Visnu gave the royal throne and Kuvera a crown. Goddess Sarasvati bestowed the quality of audibility to what is to be seen. The remaining ones, viz. the Devas, the Gandharvas, the Yaksas, Raksasas and serpents in the assembly gave the sensitive feelings (bhavas), sentiments (rasas), good form and the activity of a powerful hero, all these intended to be portrayed based on different classes and possessing different qualities. Thus the performance portraying the slaughter of the Danavas and the Daityas began.

The Daityas who had gatecrashed into the place of performance became excited and created havoc. After inspecting the playhouse Brahma said to all the Suras, "This pavilion of dance and dramatic performance should be protected by you all taking up the responsibility of the different parts separately. Brahma occupied the centre of the stage. Hence flowers are regularly scattered there before the performance starts.

(96) May the actor who adopts the role of the Nayaka (hero) be under the protection of Indra. Goddess Sarasvati shall protect the actress in the heroine's role; Lord Omkara shall protect the Vidusaka, the jester, and Lord Siva shall protect the other characters in the play.

Characteristic features of the dramatic art

(106) Being the representation of the states of all the worlds it does not exclusively depict Daityas or the gods.

(107) In it there is reference to Dharma (piety), Artha (wealth), peace, laughter, fighting and even slaughtering. Lovemaking too is depicted.

(108-109) The drama teaches the path of Virtue to those who carry on their duty; the modes of love to those eager to get it fulfilled; it admonishes the uncivilized and the ill-natured ones; encourages self control of those who are amenable to discipline; makes the coward bold; the heroic ones are given more incentives, the men of poor intellect are enlightened and the wisdom of the learned is enhanced.

(110) The play entertains kings and the affluent ones, those who are sorrowing can receive solace therefrom; those who want to acquire wealth can understand ways and means thereof; and men who become agitated can derive composure and comfort from it.

(111-112) Imitation of the conduct of the people full of emotional fervour while depicting different situations is the main item in the type of drama evolved by me. All sorts of people whether good or bad have been represented in it, in order to accord encouragement, amusement and pleasure along with sound advice to everyone.

(113) Thus the play becomes an agent for educating people through the Bhavas and Kriyas found depicted therein, through the Rasas expressed and implied.

(114-115) Persons of bad fortune can overcome their afflictions due to sorrow and surmount the fatigue of overwork and strain. Thereby the art of drama is conducive to the observance of duty, acquisition of fame, long life, intellect, all-round good and learning in every aspect.

(116) No wise utterance, no means to achieve learning, no art or craft and no useful device is omitted or ignored in it.

(117-118) All the branches of learning find a place in the drama devised by me; different arts and actions converge therein. Hence, O Daityas, do not become offended with the Suras because imitation of everything taking place in the world of seven continents is an invariable feature of the Dramatic art.

(119) Vedic anecdotes, stories from Itihasas and other sources are so utilized as to give pleasure to those who witness. This is the beauty of drama.

(120-121) A close imitation of the gods, daityas, kings, householders, etc. and their day-to-day activities represented through gestures etc. is called drama.

Adoration and floral offerings

(122-123) Brahma then said to the gods, - "In the playhouse you must have adoration with offerings, performance of Homas with Mantras and Japas and Naivedyas (food offerings) should consist of all types of foodstuffs hard and soft.

(124) There shall be a happy adoration of the world. The dramatic performance shall not be held without the stage adoration.

(125) He who conducts the dramatic performance without floral offerings and adoration will find his knowledge ineffective. He is likely to be reborn as a lower animal.

(126) Producers of plays of entertainment shall not conduct them without a previous offering of Pujas to the presiding deities of the stage. This is on a par with the Vedic Yajna.

(127) Whether it is the Nartaka (dancer) or the Arthapati (lord of wealth), if he does not perform the Puja himself or through others he is found to sustain loss as a result of the omission.

(128) Those who offer the adoration in accordance with conventions shall definitely attain splendid wealth and heavenly pleasures later.

(129) Then Brahma and the gods said to me, - "May everything be thus. Offer the Puja to the stage".

The gist of the topics dealt with in the First Chapter

The poet composing the literary piece for depiction in dance or drama should have the qualities and abilities of Brahma the creator of the universe; the sponsor of the dramatic performance as well as the stage manager should be a man of organizing ability like Indra; the dramatic preceptor should be as versatile as Bharata himself; the sons of Bharata, viz. Sandilya and others should be the ideal for the ordinary actors; the celestial damsels for the women participants; the expert in charge of the musical instruments should have the vast knowledge, experience and ability of Svati; the officer in charge of the music section should be like Narada, it is the duty of the organizers of dramatic performance to accord all safeguard and means of security so that the performance concludes without any disturbance, occasions of jubilation should be utilized for the performance of dramas and dance items; the people who visit the theatre should not have prejudices this way or that way; they must have the full aesthetic sense in order to rise above petty personal gains or losses. Finally Ranga Puja is an essential item in a society that meticulously follows the noble ideals of the Vedic seers of Mantras and philosophers irrespective of the schools of Darsana they may be specially interested in.

Natya-vatara

Incarnation of the Science of dramatic performance

from Natya Shastra, Chapter Thirty Six

(1-6) The sages assembled were the following [among many others] Atreya, Vasistha, Pulastya, Angiras, Gautama, Agastya, Manu, Atmavan, Visva-Mitra, Brhaspati, Kasyapa, Dhruva, Durvasa, Markandeya, Raibhya, Valmiki Bhagavan, Narada. These delighted sages said these words to Bharata who knew everything, with eagerness.

(7-15) "You have explained in detail the science of dramatic performance and we have fully comprehended it with concentration of the mind. But, O Venerable Sir, we have certain doubts which you will kindly clarify. [...] Now do expediate exhaustively the mystery of drama. [...] what is not fully revealed to the laymen may kindly be explained. O excellent, twice-born, mention the characteristics of the deity appearing in the Purvaranga [worship of the stage]. Why is Ghosa (sound of musical instruments) supposed to be relevant? [...] Which god is delighted thereby? The Sutra Dhara [reciter] is performing cleaning rites again, why? O Sir, how did Natya descend to the earth from the heaven (How your race become established in the name of Nata?" On hearing these words of these sages, the saintly Bharata spoke again to them for the purpose of clarifying the confidential matter. Bharata said, (16-29) - "I shall explain, O Brahmins, of excellent vows, what you have enquired regarding the Purvaranga. Listen and understand. Earlier I had mentioned it as the thing that causes the destruction of Obstacles. In continuation thereof the Purvaranga had been described. The body is covered with the coat of mail for avoiding the attack of missiles. So also Homa is performed to subdue the sin present in all. By worshipping gods with Japa, Homa adoradion of the deities, utterance of words of blessings and eulogy I warded off the sins and destroyed obstacles - songs about their benign activities were sung. The instruments were played. The gods were delighted and they said, - "Your performance has pleased me. Since it pleases the people after propitiating the deities and the Asuras this performance shall henceforth be known as Nandi (Verse of benediction)".

If the Kakusvana (emphetic mutter) in initiation and succession of vocal and instrumental music is auspiciously made it shall quell sins and be conducive to auspiciousness in the whole region. Neither the Raksasas nor Vighnavinayakas (malevolent) will ever stay in the region covered by the sound of the instruments. On the utterance of Nandi people hear it in the course of Avaha (marriage ceremony at the groom's place) and Vivaha (the same at the bride's place) & Yajna performed for bringing in the prosperity of the being all types of violence are always destroyed. The Pathya (passages recited), Natya, Geya (song) and Vaditra (instrumental music) will be on a par with the exposition of the meanings of Vedic Mantras. It has been heard factually from Sankara, the lord of the Devas, that the sacred song and instrumental music are more conducive to the welfare than thousand of holy ablutions and japas. No inauspicious thing will ever occur in that place where are dramatic performances and the auspicious sound of the instruments and vocal songs. It is for thus that I devised Purvaranga ceremony consisting of the eulogy of the deities and Verses and Mantras.

(30-35) [...] I shall now explain how dramatic performance happened to descend to the earth from the heaven. I have to mention everything without withholding anything. Bharata's sons offended the sages. All these sons of mine became naughty due to their mastery of the Natya Veda. They began to practice in course of time an art that vexed all the people by means of Prahansas intended to provoke laughter. In an assembly of spectators they performed a play caricaturing the sages. It was not approved because it was unacceptable and replete with wicked acts encouraging obscene and rustic activities. The poem was a ruthlessly inauspicious one.

The sages curse the sons of Bharata

(36-42) On hearing thus the sages became excessively furious and agitated. They spoke to the Bharatas [main actors] as though they were burning all of them, - "O Brahmins, enough of these pranks. It is not proper that we should be caricatured in this manner. What is this insult for? Why is this act disapproved by us? You have become maddened due to your professed knowledge. You have become rude and impolite. Hence this biased knowledge will get destroyed. You will become persons with activities similar to those of Sudras after having left off all Brahminical rites in the group and assembly of sages and Brahmins you are sure to become mere Sudras taking up their activities. Those successors in your line will also become impure. The posterity of the all will turn out to be dancers worshipping other deities along with their womenfolk and sons. On coming to know of the occurrence of this curse on my sons, the gods became worried. they rushed to the sages.

Gods plead on behalf of the sons of Bharata

(43-54) The Devas with Indra as their head averred, - "A great calamity has happened now. This Science of dramatic performance is doomed." The sages said, - "This will not perish, but everything also will transpire in the manner uttered by us".

Bharata's sons approach the father

On hearing the words of the sages of fiery brilliance my sons became bewildered and wished to kill themselves. They came to me and said, - "We have been utterly destroyed by you. As a result of the deficiency of drama we have been converted into persons with Sudra behavior and activity".

Bharata consoles his sons

By way of assuaging their grief, Bharata said, - "O sinless ones, do not be grief stricken. This arrangement has been caused by Krshta (fate) in regard to us. The words of those sages will never go in vain or be untrue. Thus consoled by me avert your minds from the thought of self-immolation. You know fully well that the Nrtya (dramatic) science has been initially propounded and set in motion by Brahma himself. By demonstrating the same, give instruction therein to the disciples and others. Dramatic art has been evolved and set in practice with great difficulty. Let it not be ruined. Actually it has a great basis. It is highly meritorious. It has originated from the Vedas, their ancillaries Angas and their further subdivisions. Impart unto the celestial damsels this Natya, explained by me on the basis of what has been heard by me and thereafter perform atonement rites".

Nahusa invites divine Artists to the earth

(52-63) As time elapsed an earthly king named Nahusa obtained the lordship of the divine kingdom thanks to his political acumen, intelligence and exploits. After attaining divine prosperity he administered the same dully. He witnessed the dramatic performance and the musical program of the Gandharvas and so pondered thus, - "How can the performance of drama demonstrated this by the Devas be held in my houses?"

With palms joined in reverence the king said to the Devas for the sake of performance thereof, - "Let this drama of the Apsaras be performed in our abode too".

Gods reject

He was duly given a reply by the Devas with Brhaspati as their leader.

"There cannot be an association of the divine damsels with human beings here. Since your highness is the lord of the heaven what is beneficial and befitting must be mentioned by us. May the Acaryas go there. After going there let them carry out what is beneficial to you."

Nahusa pleads to Bharata

The king pleaded to him with palms joined in reverence, - "O Venerable Sir, I wish that this dramatic art should be established on the earth. Earlier it has been assured to me that your service as instructor is possible. O excellent Brahmin, now it has been manifestly obtained from your presence".

Urvasi and the dramatic performance

"In the mansion of my grandfather (Pururavas) the performance of a drama based on the composition of my grandfather had been demonstrated by Urvasi before the inmates of the harem. When she vanished, the king (my grandfather) died of sheer madness and the inmates harem too died. So this art got lost. We wish that this esteemed art should be manifested on the earth again. It shall be conducive to auspiciousness at the rites of the Yajnas performed on different lunar days plays comprising of many characters shall be produced in my abode with the graceful movements of women. They will add to your renown."

Bharata concedes

I said to king Nahusa, - "Let it be so". My sons were called together along with the Devas. They were consolingly told thus by me. "This king Nahusa requests me with palms joined in reverence that you all should go to the Earth in a body in order to perform the dramatic Compositions. Once the drama is performed there I shall see that the curse upon you too is ended. You will no longer be despicable unto the kings and the Brahmins. Go therefore to the Earth and perform the art duly on the Earth. I cannot say nay to the importunity of the king. Lord Brahma has already said that we and the noble king Nahusa will achieve fulfillment through authoritative instructions. What remains further to be related will be narrated by Kohala in the Uttara-tantra (the supplementary treatise) including the demonstration, mnemonic verses and proper derivations of terms used. As an instrument of pastime this treatise has been established by me in the heaven through the collaboration of the celestial damsels and the sages Svati and Narada."

Demonstration of the dramatic art on the Earth

Then O twice-born ones, they descended to the Earth. In the abode of Nahusa they fixed programs of the woman in due order. My sons procreated through human bodies many sons and fixed many other programs with diverse themes. After begetting sons and arranging dramatic performances duly my sons returned to the heaven with the permission of Brahma. thus, evidently due to a curse the dramatic art was brought into vogue on the Earth and the future race of Bharatas [main actors] was set in motion.

(75-83) By Kohala and others along with Vatsya, Sundilya and Dhurtila this Shastra was adopted and furthered. As man they stayed there for some time and promoted the Sastra that increased the intellect of human beings. This Sastra dealing with the activities of all the three worlds can be considered a model for all other Sastras.

The greatness of Natya Sastra

This Sastra with its practical application has been uttered by the Self-born lord Brahma. It is meritorious, sacred and destructive of sins. He who listens to this, he who performs this and witnesses it with attention shall attain that goal which is reputed to be the goal of the Vedic scholars, that goals of those who perform Yajnas and the goal of those who make gifts befittingly. Of all charitable and pious rites this has been mentioned as the producer of great benefits. Indeed, the gift of a visual art is praised more than all other gifts. When worshipped with scents, unguents and garlands, gods do not get as much pleasure as with the performance of dramas. The man who perfectly looks after the arts of music and dance attains the meritorious goal along with Brahminical sages. In connection with the dramatic performance we have described many other Shastric rites. If any thing is left unsaid it should be understood by people conversant with practices imitating the usage in the world. Let the earth be full of greenery. Let it be free from ailments. Let there be peace of cows and Brahmins. Let the king rule the entire earth, Natya Sastra concluded."

The Natya Sastra of Bharatamuni, translated into English by a Board of Scholars, Raga Nrtya Series No. 2. Sri Satguru Publications, Delhi – India.

Historical Background of Vedic Temple Dance

Although the performing arts existed on earth since Treta-yuga through the agency of his sons, Bharata Muni systematized and recorded a variety of sciences, like literature, medicine, music, dance and drama, 200 BC. His treatise on the performing arts is called Natya Shastra.

In Medieval Hinduism, between 600 and 1565, the Indo-Aryan Brahminical civilization allied with the Tamil-Dravidian culture of South-India in a mutual attempt to revolve the influences of the Jains and Buddhists. This was established during the reign of the Pallavas and the Pandyas between 550 and 850.

The reign of the Cholas between 850 and 1279 is characterized by wealth and territorial expansion, which brought great prosperity to the temple communities. Religiosity and devotion flourished in poetry, which was performed according to indigenous traditions. The majestic rock temple of Lord Nataraja (Siva) in Chidambaram in the South of India was further excavated and was progressively enriched with sculptures and ornaments.

The last period of Medieval Hinduism was inaugurated by the invasion of Muslim rulers towards the South of India. To cope with the threat of subordination three allied states created a considerable defense against the invaders. This Imperium was called after their metropole, Vijayanagara, and lasted from 1336 until 1565.

In first instance the music was developed. In the second half of the imperial reign Vaisnava kings came to rule the states and Vaisnavism was proclaimed to be the state-religion. Interesting to know, that Lord Caitanya Mahaprabhu journeyed South-India approximately 1500. In almost every temple the murtis of Lord Siva were replaced by Visnu-Venkatesvara (Tirupati) and Sri Ranganatha (Srirangam). Court life became glorious under the worship of Sri Rama and Sri Krishna. Music and dance art also experienced a revolution. Their the mes of fight and heraldry characteristic of the Shaivite temple culture were taken over by the madhurya-bhakti of Sri Krishna, the devotion of erotic sweetness.

The duty of the temple dancer (deva-dasi) was to protect the king against malevolent influences from the external world by her ritual expertise. Furthermore, she was just an ornament to his court. The devadasis (servants of God) were economically, artistically and religiously exchangeable by the temple communities or the kings. The female artists who were engaged by these brahmins and kings attained the top of their artistry during this period. They danced in front of the murtis in processions and others performed abhinaya (mime) to the music. These girls were called visnu-dasis, raja-dasis and katumurai (those who offered the water pot on the altar). This is the period in which the karnatic music system was developed and in which Telugu was the national language.

The Vijayanagara Imperium fell apart in 1565 by which the Hinduistic territory moved further southwards. Three courts attained independence and inherited from their preceding rulers the duty to defend the Hindu culture. They were Madurai, Tanjore and Gingee. However, these kings decided to spend their resources meant for military defense to the cultivation of religion and the fine arts instead. The three states became a cultural center attracting musicians, the intelligentsia and artistic leaders from all over India.

The period of cultural and devotional progression lies between 1565 and 1856. In the dance art two main styles can now be distinguished, the nrtta and the nrtya: the pure dance technique with an emphasis on aestheticism, rhythms and forms – and the mime in the expression of epic or histrionic events, respectively. In the latter the bhava, spiritual emotions, have been developed. This form is called catir and dasi-attam (dasi means servant of God; attam means elevated, high).

This is the period in which the repertoire of the devadasi has been developed into a full program, as it is performed on stage still today. This traditional recital consists of several prayers, glorifications, flower offering, introductory dance, technical dance, story-telling dance, love dance, devotional love dance for Godhead, lullaby, the final technical master piece of ultimate speed and rhythm, a last prayer and the traditional conclusion. Such a traditional recital is called catir keccari. This is also the repertoire of the student who performs her Arankerram, first program on the stage after which she is initiated in the dance art as a performer and a teacher.

Since all of the artistic and religious culture had been dependent on the wealthy kings of Tanjore, these traditions fell apart soon after the annexation of South-India by the British in 1856. "The aristocratic values of the art, the devotion and the age-old tradition were lost and instead merchandizing, raids after patronage by individuals and aggressive publicity became prominent", concludes Kersenboom in Nityasumangali. This led to a final degradation of the devadasis who often were purchased as prostitutes, or nautch girls. The 'Anti-Nautch Act' launched by the Indian Government which was heavily influenced by the British terminated the brahminical profession of the devadasis on November 11th, 1947. As a profane stage art the classical temple dance survives in India and abroad.

Much of the above-mentioned scientific knowledge about the history of the devadasis in South India has been found in Nityasumangali, De Devadasi-traditie In Zuid-India, a dissertation by S.C. Kersenboom Ph.D., Motilal Banarsidass, 1987, 1998.

Bharata Natyam

The following excerpts are from the articles by Smt. Balasarasvati d.d., the last authentic devadasi and one of the greatest dancers of India. We can offer no better tribute to her than to ponder over her concept of Bharata Natyam as expressed in her own words published in Quarterly, Journal of the National Centre of Performing Arts, Bombay, 1982.

"To create the most perfect realization of rasa (aesthetic taste) in a performance, all elements must be in balance. Although tala (rhythm) provides a wonderfully strong backbone, it is undoubtedly raga-bhava (spiritual emotion) which evokes this rasa in all its varying shades and infinite variety. The rhythmic forms and its mould should be such as to augment the raga-bhava. The more the raga-bhava, the more does the abhinaya (facial expression of consciousness) shine. We should never forget that in deriving bhava-raga-tala from the syllables of the word Bha-ra-ta, there is an underlying concept of the equality of these three elements." [...]

"The masters have created separately compositions especially suited for the dance. The hundreds of songs useful for music-concerts are of a different kind. Apart from these, the masters had separated the dance-music; we should inquire into their idea in doing so. Their main ideas are (1) the raga and tala should stand inter-twined; (2) the raga and bhava should go hand in hand in abhinaya; (3) the raga and the words of the song should mingle together in the abhinaya... Songs suited to concert-singing afford no scope for the full creative unfolding of abhinaya. This is my experience. Padas (divine love songs) and pada-varnas (love songs) are indeed the jewels of dance-music. The masters of dance have so set their creations that the sequences involving strenuous physical movements alternate with relaxed passages of abhinaya. Similarly between the pada-varna and the thillana (technical masterpiece), they placed padas for quiet abhinaya. Natya-rasikas (lovers of the dance) may see this arrangement of fast and slow tempos alternating, affording a quickening and relaxation following each other. The students of dance who are to come up in the future should acquire an equal mastery of the twin arts of music and dance, understand the subtle aspects of both and abide by the underlying principles of the art as it had been developed by our ancestors over the centuries."

"It is the stream of sringara (conjugal love) that swells into the mighty river of the lover-beloved songs of the Vaisnava and Shaiva Saints, the astapadis of Jayadeva and the compositions of Ksetrajna. In Bharata Natyam, too, when it comes to abhinaya, sringara has been the dominant mood... The sringara we experience in Bharata Natyam is never carnal; never, never. For those who have yielded themselves to its discipline with total dedication, dance like music is the practice of the Presence; it cannot be merely the body's rapture."

"Bharata Natyam is an art which consecrates the body which is considered to be in itself of no value. The yogi by controlling his breath and by modifying his body acquires the halo of sanctity. Even so, the dancer, who dissolves her identity in rhythm and music, makes her body an instrument, at least for the duration of the dance, for the experience and expression of the spirit."

"I believe that the traditional order of the Bharata-Natyam recital viz., alarippu, jatisvaram, sabdam, varnam, padams, thillana and the sloka is the correct sequence in the practice of this art, which is an artistic yoga, for revealing the spiritual through the corporeal."

Alarippu

"The greatness of this traditional concert-pattern will be apparent even from a purely aesthetic point of view. In the beginning, alarippu (ala- means flower; -rippu means small; alarippu means budding flower), which is based on rhythm alone, brings out the special charm of pure dance. The movements of alarippu relax the dancer's body and thereby her mind, loosen and coordinate her limbs and prepare her for the dance. Rhythm has a rare capacity to concentrate. Alarippu is most valuable in freeing the dancer from distraction and making her single-minded."

Jatisvaram

"The joy of pure rhythm in alarippu is followed by jatisvaram where there is the added joy of melody. Melody, without word or syllable, has a special power to unite us with our being. In jatisvaram, melody and movement come together."

Sabdam

"Then comes the sabdam. It is here that compositions, with words and meanings, which enable the expression of the myriad moods of Bharata Natyam are introduced. The Bharata Natyam recital is structured like a Great Temple: we enter through the gopuram (outer hall) of alarippu, cross the ardhamandapam (half-way hall) of jatisvaram, then the mandapa (great hall) of sabdam, and enter the holy precinct of the Deity in the varnam."

Varnam

"This is the place, the space, which gives the dancer expansive scope to revel in the rhythm, moods and music of the dance. The varnam is the continuum which gives ever-expanding room to the dancer to delight in her self-fulfillment, by providing the fullest scope to her own creativity as well as to the tradition of the art."

Padam

"The padams now follow. In dancing to the padams, one experiences the containment, cool and quiet, of entering the sanctum from its external precinct. The expanse and brilliance of the outer corridors disappear in the dark inner sanctum; and rhythmic virtuositities of the varnam yield to the soul-stirring music and abhinaya of the padam. Dancing to the padam is akin to the juncture when the cascading lights of worship are withdrawn and the drum beats die down to the simple and solemn chanting of sacred verses in the closeness of God."

Thillana

"Then, the thillana breaks into movement like the final burning of camphor accompanied by a measure of din and bustle."

Mangalam

"In conclusion, the devotee takes to her heart the god she has so far glorified outside; and the dancer completes the traditional order by dancing to a simple devotional verse."

"At first, mere metre (alarippu); then, melody and metre (jatisvaram); continuing with music, meaning and metre (sabdam); its expansion in the centrepiece of the varnam; thereafter, music and meaning without metre (padam); in variation of this, melody and metre (thillana); in contrast to the pure rhythmical beginning, a non-metrical song (sloka) at the end. We see a most wonderful completeness and symmetry in this art. Surely the traditional votaries of our music and dance would not wish us to take any liberties with this sequence?"

"The greatest blessing of Bharata Natyam is its ability to control the mind. Most of us are incapable of single-minded contemplation even when actions are abandoned. On the other hand, in Bharata Natyam actions are not avoided; there is much to do but it is the harmony of various actions that results in the concentration we seek. The burden of action is forgotten in the pleasant charm of the art. The feet keeping to time, hands expressing gesture, the eye following the hand with expression, the ear listening to the dance master's music, and the dancer's own singing – by harmonising these five elements the mind achieves concentration and attains clarity in the very richness of participation."

"The inner feeling of the dancer is the sixth sense which harnesses these five mental and mechanical elements to create the experience and enjoyment of beauty. It is the spark which gives the dancer her sense of spiritual freedom in the midst of the constraints and discipline of the dance. The yogi achieves serenity through concentration that comes from discipline. The dancer brings together her feet, hands, eyes, ears and singing into a fusion which transforms the serenity of the yogi into a torrent of beauty. The spectator, who is absorbed in intently watching this, has his mind freed of distractions and feels a great sense of clarity. In their shared involvement, the dancer and the spectator are both released from the weight of worldly life, and experience the divine joy of the art with a sense of total freedom."

Singing

"Another notable feature of Bharata Natya is that the songs are vocally rendered by the artiste and the background musician. It is not dancing just to the tune of instrumental music, but dancing to the words set to music. Yet it is not just dancing to the words in their superficial meaning alone, nor is the music detached from the words and their full (inner and outer) meaning. My point is that the songs must be vocally rendered by the danseuse herself while she dances. Since she cannot do the singing with gusto because of the physical exertion of dancing, a background musician sings with her, and usually her dance master himself renders the drum syllable. Yes, these drum syllables must also be vocally rendered, even when they are not set to music as in the opening piece, alarippu."

"The artiste has to bring out through gesture not only the outer meaning of the words of the songs, but has also to interpret all their implications and inner meanings, sometimes even building up episodes around a single line. But all through this she must not change the actual words of the song that she is vocally rendering. Yes, even while she is enacting, in gestures, monologues and dialogues that are far removed from the actual words of the song, she must not utter the words fit for those situations, but only repeat the same actual words of the lyrical text. That is, whereas she is bodily, facially and figuratively gesturing myriad changing moods and environments, she vocally adheres to the same unchanging phrases in the text."

"One more interesting feature here is that, though the words are the same, she makes endless variations (of sound or abhinaya, facial expression) called sangatis in the music set for the words, variations which help to bring out the many shades of the inner meaning of the text. It is only when the artiste is a true musician and enters into the spirit of the song through music that she can interpret in gesture the song to perfection by simply keeping the movement of her hands and eyes in consonance with the ups and downs, curves and glides, pauses and frills in the music, irrespective of the actual words of the song but in keeping with the dialogue woven in gesture around them. This is justified by quoting the dance-scriptures which, of course, admit vacika- abhinaya [expression through words]. But I sincerely feel that vacika-abhinaya belongs to drama and dance-drama and not to dancing sui generis. For I consider that this feat of achieving perfection simultaneously in the variation (in gesture and music) and non-variation (in the sung word) help greatly in achieving strength and clarity of mind – which again is an important factor in yoga."

Abhinaya

"Another remarkable aspect of Bharata Natya is the great scope it affords to the artist's imagination especially in the abhinaya (facial expression). She can improvise ad infinitum moods and situations to bring out the full content of the song. Even in the nrtta part of the rhythmic foot-work, where the unity of music prevents her from taking too much liberty, she can to some extent express her native imagination in improvisation. As for the gestural part of abhinaya, her wings can soar to the very skies of freedom."

Gestures

"Another noteworthy feature of Bharata Natya is the quality of the gestures. These gestures must never be taken to be the gestures used in everyday life or in drama and cinema acting. Abhinaya is as far from acting as poetry is from prose. No feeling, no emotion, no mood, no experience, no locale is gestured in a realistic, matter-of-fact way. They are all expressed in the suggestive language of the imagination. Forceful contortions and violent movements are out of place in Bharata Natya. Yet it does not just portray the soft side of life. The deepest and weightiest subjects are conveyed by suggestion in a more striking manner than through direct stage-acting. Dignified restraint is the hall-mark of abhinaya. Even in the best of laughter, there is a restraint on the mouth movement, even at the height of wonder, there is a limit for opening the eyes; even in the white-heat of amorous sport, the danseuse has no use for movements of the torso but gestures only through the face and hands. It is this decency, decorum and dignity that imparts to Bharata Natya its divine character."

"Bharata Natya gestures eliminate all the inessentials and depict concepts and objects strikingly by creating minimal semblance to the originals mainly by virtue of the mudras. For example, in the other dancing systems, including the Indian systems other than Bharata Natya, an elephant is gesturally depicted only with a fund of details like its high and bulky size, pillar-like legs, winnow-like ears, resilient trunk with its different movements, majestic gait, etc. But see, how with the simple mudra of the four fingers – the stiffly bent first and fore-fingers signifying the tusks and the drooping middle two fingers denoting the trunk – the elephant is unmistakably suggested in Bharata Natya. Similarly a cow has to be gesturally presented in the other systems rather laboriously. But in Bharata Natya those same two fingers which stood for the elephant's tusks become the horns of the cow when tilted up perpendicularly, and the other three fingertips joined together picturize the face of the cow, and with a wave of the right hand the danseuse also represents the cowherd who drives it."